Minimum Comfort Budgets The minimum comfort budgets, on the other hand, are based on the needs and expenditures of higher grade and skilled workers. They represent an ideal to be attained, rather than a minimum of prevailing conditions which can be considered acceptable and by which all others are to be measured. Attempts to establish a budget for American workers on this higher standard seem to have developed simultaneously in two cities on the Pacific Coast in the fall of 1917. In October, 1917, Jessica B. Peixottoof the faculty of the University of i California prepared a detailed estimate of the cost of maintaining a minimum standard of wholesome living and not mere subsistence in San. Francisco¹ and at the same time William F. Ogburn and other members of the faculty of Economics and Sociology of the University of Washington prepared a minimum comfort budget for Seattle. The following summer, Ogburn prepared for the National War Labor Board a budget for a level above that of a minimum subsistence. In August, 1919, the United States Bureau of Labor Statistics attempted to determine the cost of maintaining the family of a government employee in Washington at a level of health and decency. ⁴ Early in 1920 the articles listed in this budget were priced in several bituminous mining towns and a budget thereby was worked out for bituminous miners.⁵ The minimum quantity and cost budget necessary to maintain a government employee s family...
